

Substance use disorder prevention works.

And now, Colorado has a strategic plan to synchronize primary prevention efforts.

Prevention, harm reduction, treatment and recovery all play critical roles in the substance use disorder continuum of care. This plan focuses on preventing substance abuse before it happens.

Primary prevention is a public health approach to help communities avoid substance use disorders before they start.

Colorado has been doing this work for decades — from programs to strengthen youth decision-making skills, to community-level efforts to change local liquor store policies. A strategic plan is essential for coordinating these efforts.

Supported by the Colorado Department of Human Services, Office of Behavioral Health, key state and local agencies that fund prevention programming have developed Colorado’s first strategic plan for primary prevention of substance abuse. These partners and funders have committed to:

- Reinforcing how their complementary prevention efforts are coordinated,
- Continuing to promote evidence-based prevention strategies and approaches, and
- Implementing this plan collaboratively between 2019-2024 to strengthen Colorado’s comprehensive prevention efforts.

Example participating partners and their prevention funding programs are described below. Their objectives and strategies are outlined in this brief.

Primary Prevention of Substance Abuse: Examples in Colorado

LifeSkills Training:

Teaches students skills in self-management, and drug awareness and resistance in a classroom-based, multiyear approach.

Strengthening Families (For Parents and Youth 10-14):

Promotes parenting skills and positive family relationships through parent trainings, child skills-building, and family sessions.

Communities That Care:

Mobilizes community stakeholders to collaborate in selecting and implementing evidence-based prevention approaches.

Figure 2. Colorado’s Leads for Implementing the Statewide Strategic Plan for Substance Abuse Prevention

The plan outlines two major goals for Colorado's prevention funders and program administrators:

Reduce and prevent substance abuse and misuse among youth and their families.

Reduce risk factors that predict and strengthen protective factors that prevent substance abuse and other behavioral health problems among youth and their families.
