INTRODUCTION

Colorado Migrant Education Program

The Migrant Education Program (MEP) is part of Title I part C, and Public Law 89 -10. The intent of the program is to assist underprivileged migrant families and their children. Support efforts focus on assisting families to overcome the barriers of language, high mobility, limited health and academic resources.

The U.S. Department of Education, Office of Migrant Education allocates funds to individual states based on the state's identified migrant population. The Colorado Department of Education (CDE) is responsible for allocating funds and supervising programs and services provided by Board of Cooperative Educational Services (BOCES) or school districts where migrants reside.

The migrant population is made up of diverse ethnic groups. Latinos make up the largest group with non-Latino blacks, whites, Native Americans and Asians completing the overall population.

Migrant workers seek temporary or seasonal jobs in agriculture, fishing or related work, including food processing. Many follow the migrant streams and are largely responsible for the cultivation and harvest of fruits, vegetables and many other food products across the country. Most migrant workers have an average annual income below the national poverty level.

Most school programs (including those supported by Title I) are designed on a nine-month calendar year. The high mobility of migrant families disrupts the education of school age children. Poor nutrition, housing and sanitary conditions may cause a high incidence of health problems. They may have limited English skills and/or little experience with success in school. These problems, combined with irregular attendance, often lead to overall frustration and low academic performance, causing many children to drop out in their early teens. Due to their high risk profiles and lack of preparation migrant youths usually face unemployment or become part of the migrant labor force.

The MEP supports students in their efforts to achieve an education and develop their skills, self-confidence and earning potential.

Each MEP offers services appropriate to its particular needs, population and location. Programs may vary widely; however, the following supplemental services are generally provided:

- Emergency contact across the U.S. Escort Hotline 1-800-451-8058
- Networking and instructional opportunities for parents through Parent Action Committees, Parent Advisory Committee (PAC's).

- In conjunction with community agencies, the MEP offers support services, including medical, dental, nutritional and psychological services.
- Preschool and kindergarten programs such as Migrant Education Even Start (MEES) are designed to prepare migrant children for a successful school experience.
- Supplementary English language instruction for second language learners.
- An assurance of sequence and continuity between schools in the instructional program by coordinating the use of textbooks, test materials and methods.
- Individualized instruction through teachers, tutors and aides.
- Summer school programs to supplement regular school year programs.
- Secondary Education Programs
