Dear Citizens of Colorado:

Cultures, societies and individuals are all a product of their histories. Legacies shape us; they define our identity. The American Indians in Colorado are a fundamental part of our heritage and, more importantly, their influence is crucial to Colorado's character today. With this in mind, I am both proud and honored to have a key role in bettering the lives of Colorado's American Indian community. The Colorado Commission of Indian Affairs is pleased to present the fifth edition of the Colorado Directory of American Indian Resources.

The Commission is dedicated to serving with the Ute Mountain Ute and Southern Ute Tribes, as well as the Native American community throughout Colorado. Through educational, occupational, economic, and health-based efforts, the commission aspires to improve the overall quality of life for Colorado's American Indians while preserving the culture and traditions that are so important to our history. Government-to-government communication has been and will continue to be imperative in achieving this objective.

The Commission, in association with the Colorado Legislature and the Rocky Mountain Indian Chamber of Commerce, has already procured funding for the American Indian Scholarship Fund. Native American specialty license plates, the first of their kind in Colorado, finance the fund with the proceeds from their sales. These license plates and the consequent scholastic funding are an aggressive step in advancing recognition for Colorado's Native American groups, tribes, and communities. The communication is staunchly devoted to the future success of the Native American population in all arenas, and whether it be the protection of natural resources, the issues of land ownership, of general welfare, each is a goal for which the Commission and I will continue to strive. My hope is that the commission serves as a valuable forum for discussion and as a means for change. As such, I further hope that this directory will assist our understanding of the commission, its priorities, and its relationship to the Native American community in Colorado. We remain the product of our history and, together, all is possible.

Sincerely,

COLORADO COMMISSION OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

The Colorado Commission of Indian Affairs was created in 1976 by the Colorado General Assembly as the official liaison between the two Ute Tribes and the State of Colorado. Legislators and tribal leaders envisioned a productive relationship between the state and tribal governments. Since its inception, the Commission has worked with the two Ute Tribes in Colorado and the off-reservation American Indian people who live in Colorado.

I. Statement of Purpose:

The goals of the Colorado Commission of Indian Affairs are to:

- Strengthen the government-to-government relationship between the State of Colorado and the Southern Ute Indian Tribe and the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe;
- Promote respect and a better understanding of the sovereignty of the Colorado Indian Tribes; Encourage state government to serve the interests of the Indian people of Colorado and to deal equitably with the tribal governments in Colorado;
- Improve understanding and communication between Indians and non-Indians residing in Colorado;
- Keep Colorado Indian Tribes, organizations, and constituencies informed on important matters affecting their interests; and
- Support projects and activities beneficial to Indians residing in Colorado.

II. Duties - CRS 24-44-103 - It is the duty of the Commission to:

- A. Coordinate intergovernmental dealings between tribal governments and this State;
- B. Investigate the needs of Indians in this state and provide technical assistance in the preparation of plans for the alleviation of such needs;
- C. Cooperate with and secure the assistance of the local, state, and federal governments of any agencies thereof in formulating and coordinating programs regarding Indian affairs adopted or planned by the federal government so that the full benefit of such programs will accrue to the Indians of this state;
- D. Review all proposed or pending legislation and amendments to the existing legislation affecting Indians in this state.
- E. Study the existing status of recognition of all Indian groups, tribes, and communities presently existing in this state;
- F. Employ and fix the compensation of an executive secretary of the Commission, who shall carry out the responsibilities of the Commission;
- G. Petition the General Assembly for funds to effectively administer the Commission's affairs and to expend funds in compliance with state regulations;
- H. Accept and receive gifts, funds, grants, bequests, and devices for use in furthering the purposes of the Commission;
- I. Contract with public or private bodies to provide services and facilities for promoting the welfare of the Indian people;
- J. Make legislative recommendations, and
- K. Make and publish reports on finding and recommendations.

ANSWERS TO FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS*

Who is an American Indian?

There are millions of people with Indian ancestry, but that does not make them American Indians in the eyes of tribes or the federal government. The federal government considers someone American Indian if he or she belongs to a federally recognized tribe. Individual tribes have the exclusive right to determine their own membership. Tribal governments formally list their members, who must meet specific criteria for enrollment. Some require a person to trace half of his or her lineage to the tribe, while others require only proof of descent.

Why are native peoples referred to as Indians?

Indigenous people in the United States were first referred to as Indians because Columbus believed he had reached the East Indies when he touched the shores of North America. Today, many Native people prefer to call themselves American Indian to avoid stereotypes associated with Indian.

Which is correct: American Indian or Native American?

Either term is generally acceptable, although individuals may have a preference. Native American was first used in the 1960s for American Indians and Alaska Natives. Over time, Native American has been expanded to include all native peoples of the United States and its territories, including Hawaiian natives, Chamorros and American Samoans. (Native American and American Indian are used interchangeably in this document.)

How many American Indians and Alaska Natives are there?

There are 2.3 million, according to U.S. Census estimates for 1997. They represent roughly 1% of the overall population. Before Europeans arrived in North America, Native Americans may have numbered as many as 10 million. By the time colonists began keeping records, the population was substantially less, ravaged by war, famine, forced labor and disease from Europeans.

Who are Native American families?

Nearly two-thirds are married couples, and 27 percent are families headed by single women. Birth rates are higher among American Indians families than the rest of the United States, and there are more American Indian families living in poverty than other Americans. American Indian families median income was $22,000 in 1990, compared to $35,000 for all U.S. Families.

Are the numbers of American Indians declining today?

The population is young and growing steadily. Since July 1990, the American Indian and Alaska Native population increased 12 percent, while the white population grew three percent. The US Census projects that the American Indian and Alaska Native population will reach 4.4 million by 2050.

What is a tribe?

Originally, tribes were a society of people bound by blood ties, family relations and a common language. They also had their own religion and political system. When members of different tribes were forced to live together on reservations, some new tribal groupings formed.

How many tribes are there?

In 1998, there are 554 federally recognized tribes in the United States, according to the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs. This includes 226 native villages in Alaska. Federal recognition acknowledges the government-to-government status a tribe has with the United States, and also provides for certain federal services.

(faq con't)

Are Indian tribes and Indian Nations the same?

Yes. The U.S. Congress considers the federally recognized tribes self-governing or sovereign nations. Thus, the federal government deals with tribes as political entities, not as persons of a particular race. The political status of tribes is written in the Constitution: The Congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and with the Indian tribes.

What powers do the tribes, as nations, hold?

They have a nationhood status, enjoying the powers of government, except of those expressly taken away by Congress or overruled by the Supreme Court. The United States recognizes the tribes rights to form their own government, determine membership, administer justice, raise taxes, establish businesses and exclude people from reservations. Tribal nations regulate Indian land, resources and the conduct of tribal members on Indian land.

What kind of governments do the tribes run?

Most tribal governments are organized democratically with elected leaders in highly developed political systems that often predate the arrival of European settlers. While similar in structure to American governments, the tribal governments are smaller, with far fewer resources.

What is the tribal council?

The tribes governing body is usually referred to as the tribal council, and is elected by adult members of the tribe. Heading the council is one elected chairperson, president, chief or governor who is the recognized leader. The council performs the legislative aspects of tribal government.

What is a reservation?

Indian reservations are areas of land reserved by the federal government as permanent tribal homelands. The United States established its reservation policy for American Indians in 1787. Today there are 314 reservations, among the last, large tracts of private lands.

Do all American Indians live on reservations?

No. More than 60 percent live away from reservations, the US Census reports. However, many return to visit family and attend ceremonies.

What is trust land?

Land held by the United States for the use and benefit of American Indian tribes. Virtually all trust land is located in reservations. Tribes also have the ability to purchase land and to petition the federal government to hold it in trust, protecting the land from encroachment or seizure. Actions affecting title to trust lands, including sales, are subject to approval of the U.S. Secretary of Interior.

Has the government tried to take away tribal land?

From the 1880s to the 1930s, Congress opened tribal lands for sale, with reservations losing two-thirds of their land base. In the 1950s, the Eisenhower administration adopted a termination policy, closing many reservations while trying to assimilate Indians into white society.

What kind of mineral reserves are on tribal land?

Reservations contain a wealth of minerals: 5 percent of the nations oil and gas reserves, 50 Percent of the uranium and 30 percent of low-sulfur coal. Other minerals include phosphate, quartz crystal, sand, gravel, potash and sodium. Even if tribes do not mine the minerals, they may lease the rights to others.

What is Indian country?

Indian country is a legal term used in Title 18 of the U.S. Code. It broadly defines federal and tribal jurisdiction in crimes affecting Indians on reservations. But it also has popular usage, describing reservations and areas with American Indian populations.

(faq con't)

What is tribal sovereignty?

Just like states, tribes have attributes of sovereignty govern their own territory and internal affairs. The status of tribes as self-governing nations is affirmed and upheld by treaties, case law and the Constitution. Legal scholars explain that tribes are inherently sovereign, meaning they do not trace their existence to the United States.

What is the government-to-government relationship?

It is federal policy expressing how the United States interacts with tribes. It requires the United States to assess federal actions affecting tribes and to consult with the tribes about those actions.

How are tribes exercising their status as sovereign nations?

In New Mexico, for example, the Isleta Pueblo tribe is requiring the city of Albuquerque to abide by its clean-water standards, which are stricter- and costlier than state requirements. In the Pacific Northwest, tribes partner with state and federal governments to co-manage fisheries and protect salmon stock.

What is sovereign immunity?

It is the ability of a government to define the terms upon which it can be sued. Tribes have invoked sovereign immunity in suits that challenge their authority to regulate land use. There have been recent efforts in Congress to limit a tribes sovereign immunity, but they have not been adopted.

Are Indians American citizens?

Yes. Indians have dual citizenship as tribal members and as American citizens. Congress extended citizenship to American Indians in 1924.

Do Native Americans pay state or federal taxes?

They pay the same taxes as everyone else with the following exceptions: Native Americans employed on reservations do not pay state income taxes. American Indians living on trust land are free from local and state property taxes. Generally, state sales taxes are not levied on Indian transactions made on reservations. Indians do not pay federal income taxes on money earned from trust lands, such as fees received for grazing rights and oil drilling.

What are treaties?

From 1777 to 1871, US relations with Indian nations were negotiated through legally binding agreements called treaties. These treaties, or agreements, between tribal governments and the United States transferred and created property rights as well as service obligations. There were 371 treaties signed with American Indian tribes, usually to gain rights to their land.

What agreements did the treaties contain?

The treaties often promised Indians protection, goods, services, self-governing rights and a tribal homeland in exchange for their cooperation and vast acres of land.

Why did European settlers enter into treaties with the tribes?

Tribes had power because of their military strength and knowledge of the land. They could have forced Europeans off the continent, if they had banded together. European law also taught colonists that land transactions required legal documentation.

Why did the tribes agree to the treaties?

Faced with giving up their lands or losing their people to war, disease and a rising tide of settlers, the Indians entered into the agreements. The tribes view treaties as solemn moral obligations.

(faq con't)

Are treaties still valid?

Although the government stopped entering into treaties with Indian tribes in 1871, the Constitution holds treaties as the supreme law of the land. Once a treaty is signed, it stays in effect unless superseded by acts of Congress or other treaties.

Do treaties grant Native Americans special rights today?

In the Pacific Northwest, tribes are able to hunt, fish and gather food as their ancestors did. On all reservations, tribes have access to free education and medical care provided by the federal government. These are examples of Indian rights based on treaties signed years ago.

How many American Indians students attend public schools off the reservations?

About 480,000 American Indian children attend public schools off reservations. Some states with large populations of Indian school children provide funds for Indian language and cultural education.

How many American Indians are high school graduates?

In 1990, 66% of American Indian who were at least 25 years old were high school graduates, according to the U.S. Census. The national figure is 75%.

What is a tribal college?

Thirty tribal colleges were developed over the past 25 years to meet the unusual educational needs of students on reservations, often located in remote areas unserved by other post-secondary schools. Most of the colleges are two-year schools that focus on local economic development and work-force training. (see Tribal College List on pages 55 & 56)

How do graduation rates for American Indians compare with the general population?

College graduation rates are lower for American Indians than any other minority group, according to the American Indian Higher Education Consortium. Only 30 percent of American Indian students completed a bachelors degree within six years of enrolling compared with 54 percent of all students.

What percentage of the American Indian population holds degrees?

Nine percent of American Indian adults had completed four years of college, according to the 1990 U.S. Census. The national average for all adults is 20%. Graduation rates vary greatly among tribes.

Do Native Americans get a free college education?

No. While some tribes offer stipends or scholarships to members, Native Americans as a group do not receive a free college education. But many students qualify for federal help and other needs-based aid, because they meet poverty guidelines for all students. Eighty-five percent of students at tribal colleges live in poverty.

Do American Indians speak their own language?

The vast majority of Indians speak English as their main language, though some know their native language as well. When Europeans first arrived here, about 350 Indian languages were spoken.

How many American Indian languages are still spoken?

The precise number is unknown. It is estimated that about 200 languages are spoken. Native American languages are classified- geographically rather than linguistically, since they do not belong to a single linguistic family, as the Indo-European languages do.

(faq con't)

What is a powwow?

Powwow comes from the Narragansett word for shaman. It is a celebration and social gathering, honoring sacred Indian traditions through dancing, drumming, singing and the gathering of people. Powwows may be held to honor an individual or for a special occasion. Most commonly, the powwow is a social event.

Are non-Natives welcome at powwows?

There are ceremonial powwows that are closed to non-tribal members, but everyone is welcome at a publicized powwow.

Why do Native Americans object to the use of Indian symbols , like feathers and face paint, in U.S. Sports?

Many Native Americans believe the use of Indian symbols by sports teams and fans trivializes their way of life. For example, some Native Americans take offense when fans paint their faces at football games. In traditional native cultures, face painting is reserved for sacred ceremonies that include weddings and funerals.

How can a person trace his or her Indian ancestry?

The first step is basic genealogical research to obtain specific information on ancestors names, birth dates, marriages and deaths, and places where they lived. The next step is to find out if ancestors are on official tribal rolls. For information, write to the National Archives and Records Administration, Natural Resources Branch, Civil Archives Division, 8th and Pennsylvania Ave., NW, Washington DC 20408. After determining tribal heritage, individuals should contact individual tribes to learn about membership. Tribes have the final determination on who qualifies.

DEMOGRAPHIC INFORMATION

The 2000 census data reports that 44,241 American Indian and Alaskan natives live in the state of Colorado, comprising 1.0 percent of the total population. This represents a 62.78 percent increase in the Colorado American Indian population since the 1990 census.

In the southwestern part of the state, near the Four Corners area where Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Utah meet, there are the reservations of the Ute Mountain Ute and Southern Ute tribes. The Ute Mountain Tribe has an enrolled population of 2,005; the Southern Ute Tribal enrolled population is 1,376. These figures do not include a significant number of American Indians living in off-reservation rural areas near the Four Corners area, and throughout Colorado and the Rocky Mountain region.

Approximately 21,319 American Indians, from various tribes throughout the United States, are concentrated in urban communities along the Front Range of the Rocky Mountains. Over 18,000 American Indians live in the Denver metropolitan area. American Indians of numerous tribal groups are drawn to Colorado's central location in the western part of the United States.

ESTIMATED TRIBAL TERRITORIES IN COLORADO DURING THE LATE NINETEENTH CENTURY

This map is designed to aid consultation efforts. The boundaries depicted are approximate only, and should not be interpreted as tribally-recognized use areas. Please note that this information is derived largely from observations gathered in the late 1800's. Tribal territories are dynamic by nature, and consultation should therefore be conducted accordingly.

This map has been adapted by the Colorado Commission of Indian Affairs from a document developed by the Colorado Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation.*

HISTORY OF THE UTES

The oldest known continuous residents of Colorado are the Utes. Their original territory encompassed most of Colorado and Utah and portions of New Mexico and Arizona. The Utes were nomadic and subsisted by hunting big game and gathering grasses, berries and fruit in the mountainous areas of Colorado and Utah. In early history before the horse, they moved with the seasons following the wild animal herds to feed their families. The Arapaho, Cheyenne, Kiowa, Apache, Comanche, Sioux and Pawnee roamed and lived on the eastern plains. To the south in New Mexico were the Apache, sometimes cousins sometimes competitors for food and land. To the west and northwest were the Shoshones, Snakes, Bannocks, Paiutes and Goshutes.

The Utes were distinguished by the Ute language, which is Shoshonian (Uto-Astecan linguistic roots). Other Indians in the United States which speak Shoshonian are the Paiutes, Goshutes, Shoshones, and several California tribes.

The early organization of the Utes was in loose confederation of seven bands, as follows:

- ▶ THE MOUACHE — lived in southern Colorado and in New Mexico, almost as far south as Santa Fe.
- ▶ THE CAPOTE — inhabited the San Luis Valley of Colorado near the headwaters of the Rio Grande, and parts of New Mexico, near where the town of Chama and Tierra Amarilla are now located.
- ▶ THE WEENUCHE — occupied the valleys of the San Juan River and its northern tributaries in Colorado and northwestern New Mexico.
- ▶ THE TABEHUACHE — (also called UNCOMPAHGRE) lived in the valleys of the Gunnison and Uncompahgre Rivers in Colorado.
- ▶ THE GRAND RIVER UTES — (also called the PARLANUC) lived along the Grand River in Colorado and Utah.
- ▶ THE YAMPA — inhabited the Yampa River Valley and adjacent land.
- ▶ THE UINTAH UTES — inhabited the Uintah basin, especially the western portion.

Each band in this loose confederation had their own leaders, who were advised by a council of the distinguished elderly of the band. Occasionally this organization broke down, where no one could gain control as Leader. Then anyone who could gain support from more than his own family assumed the title of Leader until successfully challenged.

- ▶ The Mouache and Capote make up the present day Southern Ute Tribe with headquarters in Ignacio, Colorado. The Southern Ute population is 1376 members.
- ▶ The Weenuche are called the Ute Mountain Indian Tribe with headquarters in Towaoc, Colorado. Their most current census show 2005 members.
- ▶ The Tabehuache, Grand, Yampa, and Uintah now compromise the Northern Ute Tribe with a population of near 6000 members. Their headquarters are in the town of Fort Duchesne, Utah.

History of the Utes Cont'd: Early History of the Utes

In the early 1600's, the pattern of development of the Utes was largely dictated by the area they inhabited. The bands were broken up into small family clans for the mild weather portions of the year, spring, summer and fall because food was scarce. It took a large area to collect food for a small number of people, the women would be foot working all the daylight hours to support their families. These family clans would hunt, gather and occasionally plant some corn and beans, harvesting them in the autumn. Late in the fall before the winter storms, the families would move out of the mountains into traditional sheltered valleys and canyons of the southwest for the winter months.

During the spring and early summer, there would be visiting and many festivities, important personal events, such as marriages, were arranged. The spring Bear Dance would be celebrated. After this communal time, each family unit would prepare to go its separate way until the next spring and a repetition of the same cycle.

The Utes' lifestyle changed dramatically during the 16th Century when the Spanish rode their horses into Ute territory. Ownership of horses allowed the Utes to hunt buffalo, migrate in a larger area in shorter time and enabled them to band together for longer periods of time. The horse also allowed the Utes to increase their trade with other Indian groups, especially the Shoshone Nations to the northwest and the Pueblo Nations to the south. The Utes started to live in larger number, giving the leader and the group more strength in all facets of life. Although the family unit continued to be the basic unit of society, the leader of the band or of the larger group dictated the movement of the camp.

The 1700s marked the zenith of the Ute strength. During this time they fought many successful battles against their enemies. The leadership of the Bands fluctuated between the younger men during times of war and the older men of the council who prevailed during other times. As in earlier times, the man who had the largest following assumed the title of chief and he retained it only as long as he could keep his followers. Generally, there was little unanimity on any issue. The Spanish presence was felt in the Ute territory until 1821 when the Mexican authority came into power. A change almost unnoticed by the Utes.

The Spanish had been very careful to establish trade and create peaceful relations with the powerful Ute Nation and the Mexicans wanted to continue the practice and increase the trade. The early relationship between the Mexican government and the Utes was peaceful, resulting in the opening of the "Old Spanish Trail" as a regular trading route in the 1820s. This peace was disrupted, however, in the 1830s when Mexican farmers attempted to settle on Indian territory. The Utes and Navajos joined forces in conducting raids on Mexican settlements in northern New Mexico during the 1830s and 1840s.

The first encounter with the Anglo-American society was the Lieutenant Zebulan Pike, who entered the San Luis Valley in 1806. However the Mexican control of the area did not end until 1848 with the Mexican-American War. The U.S. government concerned about maintaining open lines of supply and communication initiated peace talks with the Utes. The United States and the Utes signed an agreement on December 30, 1849 at Abiquiu, New Mexico in which the Utes recognized the sovereignty of the United States and agreed not to depart from their accustomed territory without permission even though no boundaries of the Ute territory were defined at this time.

In 1859 gold was discovered in Colorado and thousands of settlers rushed to the area. Although not all stayed or survived, many settled and tried to farm which put increasing pressure on the Utes by reducing hunting lands. The last unprotected wild buffalo known to have existed in the U.S. were a cow, a calf and two bulls killed in 1897 in Lost Park, Colorado. The Utes became poorer and were left little area on which to hunt. The U.S. Government tried to rectify the deteriorating situation by establishing agencies at Abiquiu, Tierra Amarilla, and Cimarron, in order to give the Indians food and supplies before each winter and spring. The Weenuche were the most isolated from this contact and remained generally self supporting. Because this system of "hand-outs" was not satisfactory to everyone, a new policy to encourage farming was initiated. There was great resistance to this change in lifestyle, and the conflict resulted in hardened feelings on both sides.

In 1863, a reservation was defined for the Utes, although there was no direct attempt made to force the Utes onto this land. The Utes were not actually confined, but were forced to occupy less and less of their territories. The federal government was unable to stop the Anglo invasion and responded to this crisis by calling the Ute leaders together. In 1873, Chief Ouray signed the Brunot Agreement, which gave up the Ute's claim to about 6,000 square miles in the San Juan Mountains almost one quarter of the treaty of 1868. As a result of this agreement only a narrow strip of land along the western boundary of Colorado connected the northern part of the reservation with the southern part. This southern part, home of the three southern Bands, was a section of land approximately 110 miles long running from the Utah boundary along the New Mexico-Colorado border and 14 miles wide beginning with the New Mexico boundary and running due North.

For a period of time, the non-Indians who had settled in northern New Mexico wanted to move all of the Southern Utes out of New Mexico onto the southern portion of the designated Ute Reservation. The Brunot Agreement in fact, had stated that all of the Mouache and Capote Utes not located on the reservation in Colorado, were to be moved there. An official decree regarding the removal of the Utes from New Mexico did not take place, however, before 1877. At this point, the Utes were moved from northern New Mexico into Colorado and the government opened up a new agency on the Pine River. The non-Indians of northern New Mexico were satisfied with removal of the Utes from their area, but the people of Colorado were not.

The gold discovered in the San Juan Mountains brought increasing numbers of people to the area who felt the "Ute" problem in Colorado must be solved. With the statehood status in 1876, non-Indian citizens felt that the Indian population located in the southwestern parts of the state would discourage settlers from coming into the state, and therefore, citizens called for the complete ouster of the Utes from Colorado. A commission was set up to meet with the Utes in these negotiations and a bill passed by both houses of the United States Congress directed the President to seek that the Southern Utes move to the northern portion of the Colorado Reservation to live with the Northern Ute Bands.

The Utes refused. After several attempts to move the three Southern Ute Bands failed, the Congress of 1880 instructed the executive branch of the government to negotiate again with the Utes for their removal. The Ute leaders of the three Bands signed an agreement to relocate, not to the northern portion of the reservation, but to a new area in the southwestern part of Colorado, along the La Plata River. This agreement stated that in addition to removal of the Utes to a smaller reservation, their claims to the former reservation would be relinquished. However, removal of the three southern Bands did not proceed as the Commission had hoped; the lands in fact, designed for this reservation were poor for agricultural uses and were incapable of supporting the Utes. In addition, the continued non-Indian settlement pressured for use of these lands.

History of the Utes Cont'd: Early History of the Utes

The citizens of Colorado continued to petition Congress for a number of years. In 1895, the Hunter Act was introduced in Congress asking that the Utes be located on their old reservation in southwestern Colorado. The bill instructed that individual allotments of land were to be distributed to the Ute families in a way identical to the Dawes Act of 1897. When all the families had been given land, the special status of the reservation was to be removed and the land not taken by the Utes was to be opened to White settlements. The government hoped that once the Utes had been given the individual allotment, they would become farmers and cultivate the land given to them. The Hunter Act passed both houses of Congress and was signed into law by President Cleveland in 1895. Before the bill could be implemented, however, the Utes had to agree to it. Within several months, over 150 of the approximately 300 eligible male adult Utes had signed the new agreement; and the Secretary of the Interior decided that the Utes wanted the new agreement and approved the Act.

After approval by the Utes, a commission was named to distribute the allotments. Because one-half of the Utes had voted against the agreement and the allotment schedules, the government officials felt obligated to accommodate them. These people included the Weenuche Band under the leadership of Ignacio. The Weenuche refused to return to the old Southern Ute Reservation. This western end of the reservation was retained as land in command of Ignacio and his Band, while the areas of the eastern end were opened for allotments and later non-Indian settlement.

A sub-agency was opened by the U.S. Government for the Weenuche at Navajo Springs, south of Cortez in 1897. This separation was the beginning of the regrouping for the three bands of the Southern Utes into two Nations. The Southern Utes were located on the eastern portion of the former reservation on individually allotted land and the Ute Mountain Utes were located on the western end of the reservation on land held in common.

The Utes Move Into the 19th Century

In 1906, the United States government ceded approximately 50,000 acres from the Ute Mountain Ute Reservations for the establishment of Mesa Verde National Park. These lands are now world renowned for their extensive cliff dwelling Indian ruins. The Ute Mountain Ute received lands near the Utah border, including most of the area in and around the Sleeping Ute Mountain, in exchange for the park lands.

The Constitution and By-Laws governing the Southern Ute Tribe were approved on November 4, 1936.

The Constitution and By-Laws governing the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe were approved on June 6, 1940.

Today, each Tribe continues to develop and implement programs that benefit the present and future needs of its tribal members and their communities. But, they also keep in mind the contribution of their heritage and culture to the state of Colorado.

Southern Ute Indian Tribe

The Southern Ute Indian Reservation lies in southwest Colorado, in the southern part of La Plata and Archuleta Counties. The southern boundary is the Colorado-New Mexico state line. The boundary of the reservation encompasses 700,000 acres. Approximately 308,000 acres are Tribal trust lands, and 4,000 allotted trust acres, for a total of 312,000 acres of trust land. The rest of the land within the reservation boundary is owned privately or controlled by government agencies.

Tribal Membership

The Southern Ute Tribe's population is approximately 1,376 tribal members. 884 of them are 18 years old or older and 492 of them are under the age of 18 years old. Most tribal members are residents of La Plata County, of which most live on reservation lands or within the reservation boundaries.

Tourism and Recreation

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe has developed tourism projects on the reservation, such as the Sky Ute Lodge & Casino, which is located one mile north of Ignacio. Recreation activities include cultural tours at the Southern Ute Museum/Cultural Center during the summer. The Heritage Performers also have performances once a week during the summer. The Sky Ute Events Center has horse training classes, rodeos and pow-wows throughout the year. In November, the Southern Ute Tribe recently opened the Sun Ute Recreation Center. The center houses an Olympic size swimming pool and children's wading pool, hot tub, sauna, two full-size basketball courts with 1,000 seat capacity, climbing rock wall, fitness center, and several meeting rooms.

Economic Development

Currently the economic development efforts on the reservation are under the umbrella of the Southern Ute Growth Fund, which was created in 1999. The Growth Fund's primary responsibility is the investment of the Tribe's financial interests. The Growth Fund's projects include property acquisition (structural and land), gas and oil development (on and off-reservation) and acquisition, Tierra Group (residential construction), Sky Ute Sand and Gravel, and Red Willow Production Company.

Tribal Education

In the fall of 2000, the Southern Ute Academy opened its' doors to the education of tribal children. The academy schools children from ages 0 to third grade with Montessori curriculum. In an effort to preserve their tradition, Southern Ute children receive instruction in their unique language and culture.

Tribal Government

The Southern Ute Indian Tribe is governed by a Tribal Council consisting of a Chairman and six members, all of whom are elected at large by the Tribal membership. Each elected official serves a three-year term all of which are staggered so that elections occur annually. The Tribe maintains a full range of government services for its members.

Ute Mountain Ute Tribe

The Ute Mountain Ute Tribe's reservation lies in southwest Colorado, southeast Utah and northern New Mexico and covers 593,676 acres. There are two communities on the Ute Reservation, the tribal headquarters in Towaoc, CO and the small community at White Mesa, UT. The majority of lands there are allotted to tribal members laid out in a checkerboard design. The tribal lands are the Colorado plateau, a high desert area with deep canyons carved through the mesas.

Tribal Membership

Enrollment in the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe was 2005 as of December 2001. The majority of the members live on the reservation in Towaoc and in the White Mesa community. The tribal census shows the largest number of members are in their mid twenties and younger.

The Ute Mountain Ute Tribe has lived on this land for over 100 years. As the tribal membership grows, planning for the 21st Century is done with care to enable the Tribe to grow economically with the times but retain and preserve the culture and ways of the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe.

Tourism and Recreation

The Ute Mountain Ute Casino, opened in September of 1992, is located just outside the town of Towaoc on Highway 160/660. The Ute Mountain Ute Gaming Commission, mandated under the Tribal Gaming ordinance of November, 1991, is responsible for the regulation and control of gaming on reservation lands for the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe. Adjacent to the Casino is a popular R. V. Park for travelers. Nearby is a brand new truck stop, convenience store with an A&W. Restaurant. These enterprises all sit on Highway 160/660 to serve the traveler and truckers as they enter Colorado's Southwest/Four Corners area.

The Ute Tribal Park offers unique day trips for those who like to discover ruins away from other tourists. Reservations are required for the whole or half day tours. Visit these mysterious canyon dwellings where the only noise is the cry of the eagles and turkeys and the echo of silence.

The Tribe celebrates a special event on the first weekend of June each year. The 116th Annual Bear Dance will be celebrated in June of 2005.

Economic Development and Natural Resources

The Sleeping Ute Pottery Factory Outlet has been a tribal enterprise since 1970. The pottery outlet employs 14 people; The outlet produces approximately 50,000 pieces a year and each piece is uniquely designed, etched, painted, and signed by an Ute artist.

Ute Mountain Tribe con't

In 1985, the tribe started its own construction company, Weeminuche Construction Authority which has built the canal project from the McPhee Dam site, Federal Detention Centers, National Park Visitor Centers as well as street and pipeline systems.

The Farm & Ranch project was mandated to the Tribe within the McPhee project and now has 7600 irrigated acres on the reservation. The site of the farm is the site that the Anasazi used 1000 years ago and extensive mitigation was done during the development of the farm.

TRANSPORTATION

Metro Denver Area Bus System (Website: www.rtd-denver.com)

To get around in Denver and the surrounding areas you can take the RTD (Regional Transportation District) bus system. If you need to know the route information call 303-299-6000. When you call this number make sure to know the following information:

- Location from where you want to catch the bus.
 - Where you are going
 - What time you want to depart or arrive.
- Bus stop signs are located by the side of the road. The signs are red and white and list each route that serves the stop.

The buses will indicate their destination with a number/letter and sign above the windshield of each bus.

Light Rail/C-Line or Rapid Transit System

Call 303-299-6000 for information. The Rapid Transit System runs from I-25 and Broadway to 30th Avenue and Downing. The transits run every 6 minutes during rush hour, every 10 minutes the rest of the day, every 15 minutes in the evening, and every 30 minutes late at night.

Light Rail/Transit Bus Fares

Monday through Friday the fares are $1.25 one way. Express routes are $2.75.

Check the website for fare changes, ticket books, passes, etc.

Fares can either be paid with cash, passes, or tickets. Cash fares require exact change only - the drive does not make change.

Tickets may be purchased at:

- Any King Soopers and Safeway Grocery Store's Customer Service Desk.
- Civic Center RTD Station, Denver.
- Market Street RTD Station, Denver.
- 1600 Blake Street RTD Station, Denver.
- Boulder RTD Stations.
- Longmont RTD Stations.

Check with local schools or colleges to see if you are eligible for special passes.

Senior citizens are eligible for discounted fares.

Taxi Cabs

Check the yellow pages of the telephone directory for a list of taxi services.

Fares are metered (as soon as trip begins, driver will start the fare box). Most cabs accept cash and credit cards; however, some will also accept checks. Ask the type of payment expected before the trip begins. Tips are expected at the end of the trip. - the tip should be 10 to 15% of the total fare.

FREQUENTLY CALLED PHONE NUMBERS

Because there exists such a pressing need for information on available services for Indians, the Colorado Commission of Indian Affairs has made one of its tasks the development of a resource guide for Indians. This Directory is designed for quick reference to a comprehensive listing of Indian resources within the State of Colorado. Obviously, it does not include all resources within the state for which Indian people may be eligible, and some listings that should be included have been inadvertently omitted. However, with constant vigilance of Colorado's Indian communities, we are confident that this Directory will continue to be the best of its kind. Please contact our office to update any information, include or delete agencies/organizations, and to offer suggestions. We hope our fifth Edition is of great assistance to you!*

Many thanks to Seraphina Wall, CCIA Intern from the Colorado State University in Fort Collins, Colorado, for her work on gathering the updated information for the Fifth Edition; and to Sasha Hoskie of the Denver Indian Family Resource Center for her assistance with data verification.

We gratefully acknowledge the Oregon State Commission on Indian Services. The 1995-97 Oregon Directory of American Indian Resources compiled and edited by Gladine G. Ritter was the beacon and vision for our original document. Thank you Oregon for the inspiration to create such a resource guide for our state.

Acknowledgments also go out to Theresa Halsey, who graciously donated her time to assist in the editing and correction of this Fifth Edition. Most importantly, heaps of gratitude to Kathryn Rae of CADDO Design for design and editing assistance. Mvto (thank you).

This update was provided July 23, 2004 by S. Harrison Sadler, planetharrison.com and Jay Michael, HJM Software with assistance on open source software.

Thank you Sonny Del Castillo and Jerry Stevens for your kind permission to use graphics.
